Ukraine Stands Strong 6 Months Later

Ukrainians celebrated the 31st Anniversary of their independence on the 24th August, a date which also marks 6 months since Russia's renewed invasion.

Writing in 'The Scotsman', SNP Defence Spokesperson Stewart McDonald MP noted how Ukrainians are not only fighting to defend their freedoms but also those across Europe and the world. He added: "The war in Ukraine serves as a sharp reminder that the future is not fixed. There is a new world incubating amidst the domestic tumult and the foreign wars, and how these problems are resolved will shape the world for generations to come. Even if we just haven't all realised it yet. Sláva Ukrayíni!"

West Must Keep Arming Ukraine

Stewart McDonald MP reiterated his call for the West to continue arming Ukraine in a column for 'The Scotsman'.

The SNP's Defence Spokesperson stated his concern that there has historically been a lack of long-term thinking in the UK's political institutions. The Glasgow South MP cited the UK's failure to hold Russia's illegal and aggressive actions in Crimea and the Donbass as one example of this. He added: "...The longer we wait [to help Ukraine], the more those options will disappear and the more expensive – in both financial and political terms – those few remaining choices will become."

Scotland Can Help Tackle Global Debt

Sri Lanka is "the canary in the coal mine of unsustainable debt" warns Alyn Smith MP.

Sri Lanka has been undergoing a traumatic economic crisis which saw inflation hit 54.6% in June this year as well as extreme shortages of food and fuel. It owes more than $51bn to foreign lenders, including $6.5bn to China. Writing in 'The National', the SNP's Foreign Affairs spokesperson noted how many of the world's poorest countries were already in debt distress or at high risk. He added that an independent Scotland would be able to use its legal expertise in debt arbitration to help other countries around the world.

Lessons Have Not Been Learnt From Afghanistan

August marked one year since the fall of Kabul to the Taliban after 20 years of war. However, the UK has failed to analyse what went wrong over the course of the conflict claims Alyn Smith MP.

Writing in 'The National', Smith outlined the devastating humanitarian consequences the Taliban's recapture of Afghanistan has had on the local population. He added: "If we are serious about an independent Scotland in Europe and the world, we must be realistic about the challenges and obstacles we will face."
